4. <sup>8</sup>The Lord will judge the peo - ples of the world. Judge me ac - would pur - sue, de - liv - er me, <sup>2</sup>lest they should tear me like a e - vil to my foes or friends, <sup>5</sup>let my pur - su - er seize and wake; your right - teous judg - ment bring. <sup>7</sup>Let peo - ples gath - er and to cord - ing to my right - ness, Lord, <sup>9</sup>but let the e - vil of the li - on's prey, with none to save me from their e - vil way.

crush my life, that in the dust my glo - ry may a - bide.
you draw nigh, for their sakes come a - gain to rule on high.
wick - ed end and be the righ - teous one's se - cure de - fense.

5. You test all minds and hearts, O righteous God!
<sup>10</sup>My shield is he who saves the upright heart.
the wrath of God is burning ev' ry day.

7. <sup>14</sup>See how the wicked evil thoughts conceives;
pregnant with wickedness, brings forth deceit.
<sup>15</sup>He makes a pit, he digs it out by hand,
and then he falls into the hole he planned.

6. <sup>12</sup>God whets his sword if one does not repent;
he has his bow already strung and bent.
<sup>13</sup>His deadly weapons he has now prepared,
and makes his arrows flame; he will not spare.

8. <sup>16</sup>Upon his head his mischief will return;
upon his crown his evil will descend.
<sup>17</sup>I thank the Lord for all his righteousness.
The Lord Most High with music I will bless.
